Karim Salloum

Engineering Student

I am an engineering and business student at the Lebanese University with a diverse background in childcare and youth development. Having worked for a year at a children's playground and served as a Summer Camp Counselor, I possess strong interpersonal and leadership skills. My experience in managing activities, fostering connections, and problem-solving equips me to excel in both academic and professional settings. I am dedicated to leveraging my education to positively impact the world, combining technical expertise with a passion for nurturing young minds and facilitating growth.

My MiniCamp

Summer Camp Counselor

Responsibilities:

Oversaw a group of seven children, ensuring their safety, well-being, and engagement throughout daily activities.

Designed and executed a diverse range of daily sports, arts, and educational activities from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m., fostering physical, creative, and cognitive development among campers.

Successfully managed time-sensitive schedules, ensuring that activities ran smoothly and transitions were seamless, providing campers with a structured and enjoyable experience.

Dealt with a variety of challenging cases, including children with different needs and temperaments, by employing patience, empathy, and creative problem-solving techniques.

Developed and implemented educational components within activities, promoting learning through play and hands-on experiences.

Collaborated effectively with fellow counselors and camp staff to ensure a cohesive and well-coordinated camp program.

Kept detailed records of camp activities, incidents, and camper progress, providing valuable insights for future planning and improvements.

Key Achievements:

Recognized by camp management and parents for exceptional dedication, care, and leadership in providing a memorable summer camp experience for children.

Contributed to a positive camp atmosphere, resulting in a high camper retention rate and positive feedback from parents.
